

ABSTRACT

Method and system for controlling wireless access to a local area network. A first area is provided for wireless access to a local area network. Wirelessly transmitted within a second area is information needed by a wireless device to gain access to the local area network. At least part of the first area is outside the second area.